"Pot Luck" Fixes Value of Good Kind Husband at $9,500

New Play at Comedy Theatre Is a Feast in Season of Famine.

COMEDY THEATRE—"POT LUCK"—Comedy, by Edward G. Remond. Cast: Sarah Penfield, Miss Beth Franklin, Amy Webb, Miss Helen Palmer, William Farley, Miss Frank Alford, Miss Wren, Miss Jenny Dickerson, Phoebe Lyman, Miss Helen Stewart, Stephen McCauley, Miss James Rennie, Miss Howard Nugent, Joseph Brown, Frank E. Jamison, David Crum, Douglas Bright.

Probably the point of considerable interest to husbands—and to wives, too—about "Pot-Luck," which Kilbourn Goodnight, Inc., ushered into the world Thursday night, is the assertion by a wife that a good, kind husband is worth at least $9,500 to the other half of the argument. That may sound like a bargain price, but the audience of the Comedy Theatre cheered it particularly the $9,500 exhibits present.

Dorothy Gish, herself, applauded from a box this sentiment by the author, Edward G. Remond, and no one should know better than this movie star the par quotation on husbands, for wasn't James Kimmie, the leading man, and Mrs. Kimmie, who she has had to do with, a husband, and she has been let in on the same investment.

Some husbands, after hearing this pronouncement by the spouse who wants to be a matrimonial success, and who has just discovered he was a crook in the past, may claim their wives have been holding out on them and start to collect.

Values May Increase.

Perhaps if this charming rural comedy prospers for a long run the exchange on husbands may have increased so that at the end of six months, say, their value may have gone up to $10,000. At that time, however, it would be too late to have generally proved to appeal to the public, since to have been endowed with more insurance than that against failure.

The comic sections have always been known to provide a thriving atmosphere for crooks on the stage, but hardly before have such characters had to cope with a matrimonial success, and who has just discovered he was a crook in the past, may claim their wives have been holding out on them and start to collect.
